The Next Congress.

During the last two sessions of Congress the 292 members of the lower House have stood as follows:

The number of Independents will probably not materially change for the next House. In the transition from the Forty-third Congress, which was Republican, to the Forty-fourth Congress, which was Democratic, there was a loss of nine-ty members to the Republican party. In that it will prove favorable by to-morty members to the Republican party. In order that we may have a majority at all, it is necessary that we gain back thirty-nine members, which would divide the House as follows: Republicans, 147; Democrats and Independents, 145. But in order that we may have a two-thirds margineity, which makes the Republican party absolutely secure, no matter who party absolutely secure, no matter who sits in in the Executive chair, it is necessary to make a change of 863 votes, which would divide the House in the following proportion: Republicans, 1944; Demo-crats and Independents, 974. That we may obtain a bare majority it is only sary to gain back what was lost by the "Tidal wave" of 74 in the following States:

These are all Republican States, and will undoubtedly make a greater change than that above indicated. For instance Ohio has now now 13 Democrats among her 20 Congressmen. The probabilities are that more than 8 of this 13 will give place to Republicans in the coming ele tion. New York has only 15 Republicans out of 33 members. There is a probability of a much greater change than is indicated in the above table, and the same thing may be said of each of the States mentioned. But leaving them all as they now stand, it is safe to calculate that the remaining 46 votes necessary to give us a two-thirds majority can be gained from

THE Central German Conference, or of the six German Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of this country, held its session from the 13th to 17th inst. at Evansville, Indiana, Bishor Merrill presiding. The session was very pleasant one, and the statistics prove the work, notwithstanding the hard times, in a healthful and prosperous con

Ministers traveling, 115; local, 97 probationers, 1,102; members, 11,020; increase, 297; churches, 177; increase, 69 parsonages 71: increase, 2.

Collections—For missions, $6,065; church extension, $3,677; superannuates, $1,448; tracts, $254; Sunday School Union, $223; American Bible Society, education, $2,147.

Rev. E. F. Wunderlich, a member of said conference, has been returned for the third year to his charge on Chapline street, Centre Wheeling, and preache his first sermon on last Sunday morning from Exodus xxxiii., 15, "And he said unto him, if thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence," to a large and very attentive congregation,

COL. INGERSOLL does not think the country is going to the eternal bow-wows; on the contrary, he believes it is getting better; that it is purifying itself, detect ing and punishing its thieves, reforming its Administrations, reducing the burdens of local and national taxation, and improving its popular education and civili-nation. He closed the expression of this opinion with the following elequent words:

words:

Go to work, my friends; the world is getting better. I have got a dream that prisons will not always be cursed with the shade of the gallows; that ignorance will not always exist in this world; that the withered hand of want will not always be extended for charity; that wisdom will sit in the Courts; that charity will sit in the courts; that charity will stand in all the palpits, and that the world is progressing in education, in everything that will carry out the grand, the splendid destiny of the American people.

The Barnesville Fair. BARNESVILLE, O., Sept. 26.

Editors Intelligencer:

The District Fair opened on the Fair Grounds at this place to-day. The attendance is fully as good as in former years, and the sound of "are, hammer and tools of iron" are heard all around in arranging things for the grand opening to-morrow. Everybody is busy. The marshals of the different departments are rushing up their work and getting ready for the finishing touches that will be put on to-morrow.

for the finishing touches that will be put on to-morrow.

Floral Hall, under the deft fingers of the fair ones of Barnesville, is rapidly evolving life and beauty where before reigned a wilderness of broken remnants of last year. Some time during the interval since the last fair some fat woman seated herself on the pyramid that graced the centre of the hall and smashed it to "amithereens." Consequently the ancient order of things is not exactly as it was. The material, however, for a splendidly arranged Floral Hall is rapidly coming in, and by to-morrow noon the decoration will be completed and the articles placed on exhibition.

A large entry has been made and the

in an or completed and the articles placed on exhibition.

A large entry has been made and the Secretary at this hour, 3 r. m., with his three assistants is overcrowded with applicants, asking for entries of stock and other property. The outlook at present is that the exhibition will exceed that of any fair yet held on the grounds, and the success of the District Fair for this year is already established, provided the weather proves favorable.

The products of the farm and garden, which are exhibited at the lower hall, are numerous and first class in every respect. Commencing with the finer article of vegetables, such as are raised by the gardeners for market, and passing up through all the grades, including the mammoth pumpkins, with every variety that the farmer of gardens can cultivate and which are adopted to the soil in this latitude, they all seem represented here. This part of Belmont county seems to be specially adapted to the raising of several kinds of vegetables. Small fruits seem to be as near perfect as can be found anywhere in our country, and quite a trade is carried on in their proper season. With a soil of the character that is known in this vicinity, we naturally expect to see just such a display as is found here on trade is carried on in their proper season. With a soil of the character that is known in this vicinity, we naturally expect to see just such a display as is found here on the tables in the Agricultural Hall, and the people seem to be proud of it and would not hesitate a moment to be boastful of it. The women seated around the Hall seem to interrogate you with their looks, "Can you beat it?"

Outside of the Hall arranged with some taste is the principal display of machinery. Here are to be seen reapers and mowers, and the two combined, with their representatives each volubly expatiating to some grangers on the special merits of his particular machine, and carelessly pointing out or hinting at some defect in that of another manufacture. Then off to the left are seen threshers, grain drills, harrows, patent gates, &c.

The two principal plows represented on the grounds are the Gale Chilled and the Oliver Chilled plow both of which are strong competitors before the people. The agents of the Gale Chilled specimen of the plow valued at $25 for the best display of farm products at the fair. Being a little late in advertising the fact, the competition is not as extensive as it ought to be, yet there are several of our farmers that are reaching out for that ought to be, yet there are several of our farmers that are reaching out for that
